

Blaze And The Castle Cake For Bertha Daye

Blaze was a red wagon who dreamed of becoming a race car. He would spend hours watching the race cars zoom around the track, and he would pretend that he was one of them.

One day, Blaze's friend Bertha invited him to her birthday party. Bertha was a little girl who loved to play with her dolls and tea sets. Blaze wasn't sure what to expect at a birthday party for a little girl, but he was excited to go.

When Blaze arrived at the party, he was surprised to see that there was a huge castle cake in the middle of the table. The cake was decorated with pink frosting and white icing, and it had a big turret on top. Blaze had never seen a cake so big and beautiful before.

Bertha ran over to Blaze and gave him a big hug. "Happy birthday, Bertha!" Blaze said. "Your cake is amazing!"

"Thank you, Blaze," Bertha said. "My mom made it for me. Isn't it beautiful?"

Blaze nodded. "It's the most beautiful cake I've ever seen," he said.

Bertha smiled. "I'm glad you like it," she said. "You can have the first piece."

Blaze took a big bite of the cake, and his eyes widened. "Wow!" he said. "This is the best cake I've ever tasted!"

Bertha giggled. "I'm glad you like it," she said. "My mom is a really good baker."

Blaze and Bertha spent the rest of the party playing games and eating cake. Blaze had so much fun that he didn't want to leave. When it was time to go, he gave Bertha a big hug and thanked her for inviting him to her party.

On the way home, Blaze thought about the party and the delicious cake. He realized that he didn't have to be a race car to be happy. He could be happy just being a red wagon, and he could still have adventures with his friends.

Blaze smiled. He was glad that he had gone to Bertha's birthday party. It had been the best day ever.
