Born in 1860 in the small town of Kybartai, Lithuania, Levitan's early life was marked by both personal adversity and artistic promise. His family's financial struggles forced him to leave art school at a young age, but his passion for painting remained unyielding. Through the mentorship of renowned landscape painter Alexei Savrasov, Levitan honed his skills and developed a deep understanding of the Russian landscape's unique beauty.

In his early works, Levitan demonstrated a keen eye for detail and a remarkable ability to capture the atmospheric effects of the natural world. His paintings often depicted scenes of tranquil rivers, lush meadows, and expansive skies, imbued with a sense of serene contemplation and emotional depth.
