The Impressionist Master

Born in Paris in 1834, Degas initially pursued a traditional academic training in art. However, his encounter with the Impressionists, particularly Claude Monet and Pierre-Auguste Renoir, significantly influenced his artistic trajectory. Degas embraced the Impressionist principles of capturing fleeting moments and the effects of light and color, while maintaining a distinct personal style that set him apart from his contemporaries.

Degas's works are characterized by their delicate brushstrokes, vibrant colors, and a masterful use of pastels. He had a profound fascination with the human form, especially dancers and horses, which became recurring subjects in his paintings. Degas's ability to capture the movement and grace of these subjects with remarkable accuracy and sensitivity earned him widespread recognition as a pioneer of Impressionism.
