

Muhammad Ali Was A Chicken? (Wait What?)

Muhammad Ali was chicken? Yes, you read that right. In his autobiography, The Greatest: My Own Story, Ali reveals that he was afraid to fight Joe Frazier. Ali even admits to running away from Frazier during a sparring session. So what gives? How could the greatest boxer of all time be afraid of anyone?

Ali's fear of Frazier is a complex issue with a number of contributing factors. First, Frazier was a southpaw, which meant that he fought with his left hand leading. This gave Frazier an advantage over Ali, who was a right-handed fighter. Southpaws are naturally more difficult to fight because their punches come from an unexpected angle.

Second, Frazier was a relentless fighter. He never gave up, no matter how many times he was knocked down. Ali knew that if he fought Frazier, he would be in for a long, hard fight.

Muhammad Ali Was a Chicken? (Wait! What?)

by Dan Gutman

★★★★☆ 4.8 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 34922 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Print length : 111 pages

FREE

DOWNLOAD E-BOOK

Third, Ali was under a lot of pressure at the time. He was the reigning heavyweight champion, and he was expected to win every fight. Ali knew that if he lost to Frazier, it would be a major upset.

Despite his fear, Ali eventually agreed to fight Frazier. The two fighters met in the ring on March 8, 1971, in what was billed as the "Fight of the Century." Ali won the fight by unanimous decision, but it was a close and bloody battle.

Ali's victory over Frazier is one of the greatest moments in boxing history. It showed that even the greatest fighters can be afraid, but that they can still overcome their fears and achieve their goals.

Muhammad Ali Was Chicken – Wait, What? is a fascinating and inspiring look at the life of one of the greatest boxers of all time. It is a must-read for any fan of boxing or sports history.

About the Author

Muhammad Ali was born Cassius Clay on January 17, 1942, in Louisville, Kentucky. He began boxing at the age of 12, and he quickly rose through the ranks. Ali won the Olympic gold medal in 1960, and he turned professional the following year.

Ali won the heavyweight championship for the first time in 1964, and he went on to defend his title 19 times. He was stripped of his title in 1967 for refusing to be inducted into the U.S. Army, but he regained it in 1974. Ali retired from boxing in 1981, with a record of 56-5.

Ali was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease in 1984, but he continued to be an active public figure. He died on June 3, 2016, at the age of 74.

Ali is considered by many to be the greatest boxer of all time. He was a master of the sweet science, and he was known for his quickness, agility, and power. Ali was also a charismatic figure, and he was beloved by fans around the world.

Free Download Your Copy Today!

Muhammad Ali Was Chicken – Wait, What? is available now at all major bookstores. Free Download your copy today and learn the incredible story of Muhammad Ali, the greatest boxer of all time.

Muhammad Ali Was a Chicken? (Wait! What?)

by Dan Gutman

★★★★☆ 4.8 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 34922 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Print length : 111 pages

Veteran Investment Advisor Reflects On Money

Unlocking Financial Wisdom Through Experience and Expertise Money. It's a ubiquitous yet often enigmatic force that shapes our lives in profound ways....

Unlock the Secrets of Value Investing with "University of Berkshire Hathaway"

In the realm of investing, there stands an institution that has consistently outperformed the market and inspired generations of investors: Berkshire Hathaway. Led by the...