As a concerned citizen, Sarah was acutely aware of the climate crisis and the urgent need to act. But like many people, she felt overwhelmed by the magnitude of the problem and unsure of where to start.

Inspired by a TED Talk by environmentalist Bill McKibben, Sarah decided to quit her job and embark on a year-long adventure to learn more about the climate crisis and how to make a difference.

Her journey takes her from the Arctic ice caps to the rainforests of Brazil, from the wind farms of Texas to the solar fields of California. Along the way, she meets with scientists, activists, and people from all walks of life who are working to protect the planet.

"The Adventures of a Guilty Liberal" is a captivating memoir that blends humor, adventure, and social commentary. Sarah's journey is both inspiring and relatable, and her honest and often self-deprecating voice will resonate with readers from all backgrounds.

Excerpt

In one chapter, Sarah travels to the Arctic to witness the effects of climate change firsthand. She writes:

“ "I stood on the edge of the Arctic Ocean, watching as a polar bear cub played on the ice. The sun was shining, but the air was cold and the ice was melting all around us. I couldn't help but feel a sense of guilt. I had flown thousands of miles to get to this remote location, and my presence was contributing to the very problem I had come to witness." ”

Sarah's journey is not without its challenges. She faces criticism from both sides of the political spectrum, and she struggles to reconcile her desire to live a sustainable life with the realities of modern society.

But despite the challenges, Sarah remains committed to her mission. She believes that we all have a responsibility to protect the planet, and that even small actions can make a big difference.
